Training summary

Although the training agenda was very strict and many contents had to be introduced and dealt with, all above mentioned training objectives have been fully achieved:

- All participants were presented and consented to objectives of the project; time frame; project partners and other stakeholders. Understanding the project deeply will make the factories working more open and closely with all project team.

- The trainees’ awareness on the roles of positive dialogue at working place was raised through introduction and discussion on relevant rules and regulations, business cases and their actual practices in their workplace.

- The dialogue teams realized their role at the factories and committed to work closely with the project so that they can help factory run more smoothly on finding ways to solve problems together with management at their factory.

- Some qualitative feedback:

  - All topics are useful, especially “dialogue in the workplace” section.
  - Help to understand worker reps’ rights and responsibilities
  - Help to understand more about the law, worker representatives’ right and responsibilities, self-confidence when communicating and taking with factory management and ahead of the crowd.
  - Enhance the roles of worker representatives on dialogue between workers and worker representatives and between factory management and worker representatives.
  - Understand and share among participants
  - Understand the roles of worker reps in dialogue with management and workers.
  - Communication skill, understanding and using law, the roles of being a worker rep.
  - Able to help workers at the work place
  - Improving skills and knowledge to solve problems,
  - Raising my awareness and understanding dialogue with relevant stakeholders in factory, helping me to understand more about my responsibility as a worker representative.

(A trainee’s quote after completion of this training)
Some highlights during the training:

(1) A very important content of this training is to clarify the roles of Worker Representative as the Vietnam Labour Law and other relevant regulations mentioned. Despite to some challenges such as:
   - Workers’ low education and awareness;
   - Difficult to follow all instruction mentioned in the Decree
   - Identify the relevant regulation on some problems and in-charged persons on solving problems.

The workers found it was very useful to practice and get to know more knowledge on Vietnam labour law as well as to use Better Work Guideline\(^1\) for their resource reference.

(2) Reviewing the system for dealing with complains in the factories, shared by the trainees:

Training method

This two-day training workshop was conducted using a combination of group activities and group presentations, open discussion, lecturing, role-play as well as self-reflection sessions of compiling individual action plans towards actual application of the learning.

Training summary

Although the training agenda was very strict and many contents had to be introduced and dealt with, all above mentioned training objectives have been fully achieved:
The trainees’ awareness on the roles of positive social dialogue was raised through introduction and discussion on relevant rules and regulations, business cases and their actual practices in their workplace.

The trainees gained more understanding on what kind of legal instruments used at the factory that legalized their rights as well as the commitment and agreement used at the workplace. The WRs also got to know the methods for collecting the opinion and needs of the workforce at factory, identifying the priorities topics that workers concern. Moreover, by learning and practicing negotiation skills they have some practical skills for better preparation of the first dialogue meeting between management and workers representatives.

Some qualitative feedback:
- Learnt negotiation skill at the meeting between factory management and worker representatives
- Understand the roles of a worker representative
- Learnt dialogue skill
- Benefits of collective dialogue and negotiation
- Meeting and talking with factory management
- Practical actions to be beneficial to both workers and business
- Help to understand new thinking and working methods
- Understanding and sharing among participants
- Topics about salary and non-salary
- Consider if and how to collect workers’ view
- Negotiate for optimal results and mutual benefits

- Some highlights during the training:

(1) Some easiest and most enjoyable tasks of the role as WR were identified by WRs:

- Being listened to true opinions of workers
- Get trust from workers
- Easy to talk, to discuss and to share with workers
- Listening to workers
- Represent to workers
- Being as a bridge between workers and factory management

(2) Some hardest/most difficult part in WR’s role

- Talking and presenting workers’ problems to management
- Lack of time for doing WR’s role
- Identifying, analysing and solving problems
- The existing WRs not be disseminated in the factory
- How to convince factory management

After complement of this training I know how to negotiate with factory management to solve workers’ problem, contributing to better business operation

(A trainee’s quote after completion of this training)
(3) The participants identified 10 topics that workers would like to see improved:

- Seniority wage
- Bonus; benefits, allowance
- Working time
- Meal quality
- Working conditions: Cooling systems, lighting conditions and noise cancelling at the production workshops
- Safety and health at some places
- Clean restroom
- Grievance mechanism
- Absentism
- Management's attitude towards workers
- Transportation for pregnant female workers

(4) Working in groups on making formal proposals for the agenda based on the above topics, some contents of the proposals were identified:

- More overtime to increase monthly income
- Improving meal quality
- Easier at personal leave
- More Traditional New Year bonus
- Setting reasonable productivity norm
- Making long term contract for demanded workers
- Not cutting labour contract with pregnant workers and female workers having small children
- Suitable jobs for pregnant workers
2.3 Dialogue at working place

Activity: Dialogue between factory management and dialogue team at factories
Date: July – August 2016
Location: Hochiminh City, Vietnam
Language: Vietnamese
Observer:
Nguyen Thanh Trung, Vietnam Business Council for Sustainable Development
Nguyen Phi Ho, Hochiminh City Federation of Labour

Activity objectives and outcomes:

Objectives:

1. Members of the dialogue teams themselves practised on collecting, identifying and prioritizing information and problem from the workforce to negotiate with factory management.
2. Actual meeting and dialogue between factory management and the dialogue team.
3. Creating opened and cooperative dialogue between factory management and the dialogue team.
4. Building solid and sustainable foundation of dialogue at workplace for all participating factories.

Outcomes:

04 dialogues between factory management and dialogue teams were implemented.

Activity summary

After completing two intensive training sessions for the dialogue teams May and June 2016, 4 factories implemented in-factory dialogue from July to August 2016. The worker representatives got support from factory management and Trade Union while doing their roles at the factories.

In general, the dialogue teams played their roles in a very good way. They followed the guidance that they learnt from the trainings. They were also supported by the project trainer and VBCSD via desk support on preparation to collect information, meeting to discuss with the workforce, prioritizing problems and issues to negotiate. During the dialogue meetings, the project team could see the confidence of the dialogue teams in terms of talking, raising and presenting issues, protecting their ideas and convincing the factory management. However, due to time from completion of the group trainings to the dialogues was short, the problems to be discuss were not so many and almost focused on benefits, working conditions, and working hour. 4 factories that implemented dialogues includes:

3. IMPACT ASSESSMENT OF THIS PROJECT

3.1 Status of dialogue in 4 factories before participating this project

- Advantages:
The 4 factories are also operating the garment sector. The cooperation and mutual agreement among Factory Management, Trade Union and dialogue teams contribute to regular dialogue implementation according to the law at the working place

- Difficulties and challenges:
Before participating this project, the factories concentrated in business operation, not doing grassroots democracy regulation well.

- Capacity of the dialogue teams:
The dialogue teams had not ever participated in any capacity building training on dialogue, negotiation with employers

- Periodical dialogue at the factories:
As the dialogue team members at the factories have held many jobs concurrently, organising periodical dialogues are latter than usual.

- Issues/problems to be discussed and negotiated and the results:
Inexplicit targets, solutions, tactics for good results in discussion and negotiation with employers

3.2 Impact of this project to the 4 factories:

- Advantages:
The trainings within this project help the dialogue teams to identify and prioritize specific targets, solutions and tactics in discussion and negotiation

- Difficulties and challenges:
Time for collecting and identifying problems from the workforce was tight because of daily works. Workers sometimes were afraid of sharing their opinions.

- Capacity of the dialogue teams:
The training provided essential skills and practices, improved capacity of the dialogue teams. They feel more self-confident in implementation of the function at the factories.

- Periodical dialogue at the factories:
Members of the dialogue teams understand their roles and functions, leading to good collaboration with the factory management and Trade Union organising dialogue effectively and lawfully.

- Issues/problems to be discussed and negotiated and the results:
Almost problems and issues from the workforce were recognized and processed after the dialogue meetings

- Sustainability of periodical dialogue after completion of this project:
Periodical dialogue at the working place has helped employees and employers to understand each other, to share together and to have a common voice, towards harmonious, stable labour relations at work.

With the desk support of VBCSD, Hochiminh City Ferederation of Labour and the positive results from two training sessions in May and June 2016, the dialogue teams in 4 factories were active, confident in carrying out their duties in the working place effectively. Issues, problems and suggestions from the workforce were recognised, indentified and priotized before each dialogue meeting. Trade Union has also actively involved in preparation and implementation of dialogue. Some issues have been were solved imidiately at the meeting and some need time to inspect and to assess. The factory management and thier responsible sections will inform the results in writing in the earliest time.

All participating factories also highly appriciate and commite conducting periodical dialogue at the working place seriously.
